*"It's as if memories suddenly spring up from the place
I have just left and I have to work through them to get to that elsewhere..."*

The Artist

Peter Doig (b. 1959, Scotland) emerged as a key figure in the resurgence of painting in the 1990s. His dreamlike landscapes, infused with elements of Magical Realism, are now among the most coveted by collectors and museums worldwide.

Raised in Trinidad and Canada, Doig returned to Britain at the age of twenty to study art, later gaining widespread recognition as a Turner Prize nominee in 1994. His atmospheric compositions—often inspired by found imagery yet far from photorealistic—merge abstraction with memory, layering colour and form to evoke a haunting sense of place. Iconic motifs such as canoes, their reflections dissolving into water, add an ethereal quality to his work.

Doig's distinctive painterly language extends to printmaking, where he masterfully explores texture and tone. His institutional presence includes major solo exhibitions at Fondation Beyeler, Tate Britain, and the National Galleries of Scotland. In 2017, Rosedale (1991) set an auction record, selling for over $28 million at Phillips New York.

Art critic Jonathan Jones aptly described him as "Amid all the nonsense, impostors, rhetorical bullshit and sheer trash that pass for art in the 21st century, Doig is a jewel of genuine imagination, sincere work and humble creativity."

The Artwork

An avid winter sportsman, Peter Doig lived in Zermatt for six weeks in 2020 and for four months in 2021, working out of a studio on the mountain. With his inventive, painterly approach, the artist uses alpine imagery and traditional printmaking techniques to investigate landscape, material, and form. These diverse series of etchings reflect a self-referential process of experiment and innovation in which works continuously evolve into their final form. Together, this body of work pays homage to Doig's passion for skiing and connection to Zermatt, while also referencing a rich tradition of alpine paintings in Western art that began in the 15th century and was carried forward by masters such as Pieter Bruegel the Elder, Emil Nolde, and Ferdinand Holder.

"It's still an escape for me, painting, so it also takes me elsewhere. I don't think I would do it otherwise.,,
